For Tomás, nothing is more important than his son Kevin, a 12-year-old boy who sees the world in a unique way. His mother abandoned him shortly after he was born, unable to understand why her baby didn't respond like other children. The truth is that Kevin is autistic, and although caring for him has been an overwhelming responsibility for Tomás, it has also become his greatest reason for living.

Aware that his time is running out due to a terminal illness, Tomás faces his greatest fear: leaving Kevin alone in a world that may not understand him. But his son has a special gift: when he places his ear on someone's chest, he can feel the true essence of their soul. And now, more than ever, he will need that ability to find someone who can protect him when his father is no longer there.

The AI Creative Pipeline" - PJ Way

This hands-on workshop demystifies artificial intelligence for traditional filmmakers, demonstrating how AI tools can enhance every stage of the creative process without replacing human vision. Participants will explore the complete filmmaking pipeline from initial concept development and scriptwriting through production design, sound creation, and post-production using accessible AI platforms like ChatGPT, Midjourney, Suno, and Runway ML.

Rather than theoretical discussion, this session emphasizes practical application: attendees will leave with exposure to AI-generated assets and materials they created themselves. Designed specifically for the Chandler International Film Festival, this workshop bridges the gap between traditional craft and emerging technology, empowering filmmakers to leverage AI as a collaborative tool that amplifies creativity while maintaining artistic control.

When the Emergency Alert Came

Ji-min, a journalist with five years of experience at a Korean news agency, boards a flight from Busan to Seoul. Just as the aircraft lifts off, a nationwide emergency alert suddenly appears on every passenger's phone. Cut off from all networks in midair, fear and confusion spread as passengers clash over what the message means. Even the captain hesitates between continuing or turning back. As tension builds inside the isolated cabin, Ji-min tries to restore order among the increasingly panicked crowd.

Years later, he is granted power by the gods of Joseon and becomes a blind shamanic sculptor, carving the forms of demons that emerge from the darkness with his fingertips. As folk faith is trampled, he prepares a final resistance — sealing the Oni through sacred masks. ### What Remains

What Remains is an apocalyptic mockumentary set in a dystopian near-future, constructing a stark portrait of the civilizational crisis unfolding in our world today. Yet in the silence that follows the ruin, a fragile glimmer of hope emerges from the cracks of the system.

On a stormy night, Myra, drunk and distraught, hits what appears to be a little girl on an empty road. But there's no body, only memories of a past crime she thought was buried. Drawn into an abandoned hostel, Myra encounters a mechanic who isn't who he seems, and a series of spectral figures: a teenager, a middle-aged woman, and an old lady in white. Together they reveal the truth: she once killed a child and hid the body, and these are the ghosts of her stolen future. Tormented by the ghosts and hunted by sewn-mouthed revenants, Myra is forced into the same fridge where she once left her victim to die. And the 'mechanic', who locks her in the fridge, turns out to be the brother of the girl Myra killed. A girl whose revenge is still incomplete. This supernatural horror short explores how unpunished crimes against children linger, not only as ghosts but as stolen possibilities, haunting both the guilty and the society that ignored them.

Workshop: "Inside the Independent Film Ecosystem"

Regal Gilbert
1012 South Gilbert Road
Gilbert, AZ 85296 United States

Stephen Mastrocola & Adam Harris Engelhard

As the independent film market rapidly evolves, early-stage filmmakers must rethink how they finance, produce, and position their projects for long-term sustainability.

This workshop breaks down how independent films have traditionally been financed, how soft-money incentives and projected value have shaped budgets, and where those models are actively shifting. We'll explore what is realistically achievable for emerging filmmakers over the next five years, and how expectations around budgets, sales, and distribution are changing.

Using real-world case studies from recent films, we'll examine outside-the-box fundraising strategies, early career-appropriate financing structures, and emerging areas of growth and opportunity. The session is designed to demystify the business side of filmmaking and help filmmakers make smarter, more strategic decisions as they move into the next phase of their careers.
